Seeking Quiet Places off the Busy Tourist Track

Stories, Places & Atmosphere: A series exploring individual places in each Venetian Sestiere ...

REFLECTIONS ON VENICE

SEP 01, 2026

Seeking Quiet Places

There is always a focus on Slow Travel at Reflections on Venice. My first book was a travel companion about Exploring Venice Mindfully. At a time in my life when work had a series of annual re-structures I made myself slow down and look round me while on holiday/vacation.

I've looked through our photos and chosen 9 images from across the Sestieres of Venice.

There will be 6 short articles - covering each Sestiere. I've tried to choose a wild card, something a little different for each section of the city.

Something Special & Individual

In each Sestiere I'll highlight something special, a coffee, pastry, bookshop, garden, waterside pause or architectural feature.

A View in Every Sestiere

There will usually be a view, or something individual should you ever seek these places out. It's so important to feel the character of the city.

Exploring Venice Differently

Hope you enjoy following this photographic trail of exploration.

Seek out Hidden Places - 6 Sestieres of the City

All adventures need a map.

This isn't a treasure map, but it is going to lead us to hidden treasures and spark ideas for your own travels in Venice.

Below are 2 maps taken from the same source. A website called wanderarti.com

Map of Venice

Giudecca is not marked as it is technically part of Dorsoduro, though in my mind I see it as an individual sestiere as it has a different, very individual character.

The second map shows some key sites - and you will know or have heard of some of them so it should help orientate you to the city.

Map of Venice - reference source is above as a link

Source - link above - Wanderart.com

See you in the next post of this series!

Arrivederci,
Ruth